Being possessed of as much local pride as anybody, the officials are making every effort to seeure a full count. All cases which are reported to the office, by letter or by telephone, where the parties have not been enumerated are at once put in the proper hands, with instructions to the census-taker to call at the house and to keep calling unuit the information is secured. If any one is not counted it will be his own fault. Every reported case will be looked after.

Work Nearly Dene.

Although most of the enumeratorshave finished their routes, a few will hardly get every name recorded and reported before tonight. This is the case only where there have been deplays or where the district is large, or where the work for one reason or anyother has been done slowly.
